

Manual: tips for writing them

Step #1: formulate an idea

Writing at least a normal text is not as easy as it may seem, but without a predetermined idea the task becomes almost impossible. There are special services that offer to buy an essay cheap and with a guarantee of quality, but this is if you decide not to write an essay yourself and trust the professionals. Therefore, before you start writing an essay, you should clearly articulate the topic. To do this, you need to define pairs of "thesis-argument".

Thesis is a complete idea that you want to convey to the reader. Usually, the text of an essay should include at least three theses. For example, you want to write an essay on "What is the danger of envy", the thesis may look like this:

- an envious person becomes angry, it is difficult for him to enjoy the success of others, he does not want to help anyone;
- in the modern world of gloss and Instagram it will be difficult for such people to communicate with others, envy provokes isolation and promotes loneliness;
- a jealous person rejoices at the failures of others, he will not seek to counteract injustice.

The thesis can be one, common to the whole text. In support of each thesis, it is necessary to select arguments, that is, facts and examples proving them. Depending on the type of essay, it may be a real life situation, a quote, a reference to the research, etc.

Step #2: develop a basic structure

Simplicity is difficult. Among other things, it means that to create a good essay you don't need to pile it with a huge number of facts, sections, beautiful literary techniques. One of the main secrets of success is a well-thought-out structure.

When creating it, it is convenient to rely on the theses and arguments prescribed in the previous paragraph:

Introduction - this part mentions the main theses of the text;

the main part - here are paragraphs with arguments, facts in support of the thesis, which are presented in a form suitable for an essay of a certain type.

conclusion - in this section you do not repeat the main idea again, but draw conclusions based on the arguments put forward.

Step #3: use the auxiliary tools if you need them.

When you need to write something right now, there may be a problem called "white sheet fear". Even if the author knows what he needs to write about, the first step can be the hardest to take.

There can be many reasons for fear of a white paper: from ephemeral like "no mood", to quite specific like a paralyzing fear of getting a bad mark for homework or excessive perfectionism. Of course, the lack of practice also affects not the best way.

Experiments show that this problem can be solved by using text templates. The idea is simple - it is difficult for a person to write at least a sentence to stop the page being empty. If there is already some text on it that needs to be modified, it is much easier to do it psychologically.

According to statistics from the Ghost blog service, the use of content templates can increase the speed of writing posts by 600%. And here are collected templates for different types of English essays.

Step #4: subtract the text

Once you have defeated the fear of a white sheet and wrote the text, it is important to reread it a couple more times and correct errors. If you write it online, it's a good idea to use specialized tools for proofreading and grammar checking.

Such tools can help correct typos, get rid of grammar errors and improve the style of the text. Comparisons of popular products in this field in terms of cost, user satisfaction and other parameters can be found on the Internet.
